

The Wolf and the Fawn: A Hetalia Fan Fiction

Chapter 1 by Madeline Of Elves

((Choose whatever ship you please, and have fun with whatever schemes Alfred could come up with to have this new victim/love interest fall for them!))

Alfred himself was no killer. That would be an honest job, letting your victim know exactly what was going to become of them, playing no deliciously exciting mind games or the like.

You see, Alfred was a con man of the highest caliber, he knew and had performed every trick in the book, from the quick act selling false medicine to going so far as to court a wealthy man for a year before making off with his various jewels and treasures. Ha, that fool should have known better than to fall for the man with the crooked smile.

But this cheerful man was fool enough to fall in love with someone more dangerous, someone so treacherously honest. He ended up spending less time calculating the cost of false gifts for this new weak fawn for this mangy wolf to steal from, and more time daydreaming about said fawn, more like a lovesick puppy now.

He took the time to glance up with a genuine, much more flawed smile on his face when his precious victim appeared, he let himself relax around them- What the hell was happening to him?

Chapter 2 by Zara Rose

When the dear fawn walked into the room, he felt himself lean towards her without even trying to. It was like she was a magnet and he was the opposite piece. It scared and excited him.

The dear little fawn looked around the room, with curiosity burning in her eyes, before she sat across from him on the chair. He frowned. He had wanted her to sit by him and that was why he had sat on the love seat in the first place.

His irritation was forgotten when she looked at him. Her eyes were a dark chocolate brown and were wide with innocence. She blushed before she looked away from him. He wanted her even more than before now.

Maybe he was infatuated with her. He just wanted to conquest her, like all the others. But no, it wasn't that. She was more than just a conquest to him. Maybe it was the game that had him so enchanted with her. Right?
